Office Hours: Thursdays 10AM – 12PM or by appointment

Course Description
Issues of representation and identity have been a central concern for media and cultural studies scholarship for the past three decades. This course will focus on this research, tracing the evolution of how representation and identities within media cultures have been studied and theorized as a way to interrogate power structures within social life. As such, this course will take a critical feminist cultural studies approach to media cultures, contextualizing issues of representation and identity within media production, distribution, and reception contexts.

Due to the large scope of this body of work, this course will be focused around “mediated femininities,” concentrating on the ways in which feminine identities are produced, represented, circulated, and consumed within popular Western-Anglo media cultures, including television, film, video games, social media platforms, magazines, and celebrity culture. In particular, we will pay attention to how femininities are shaped by other identities, including race, ethnicity, class, sexuality, and age. Required reading will include foundational writing in the field, recently published research that grapples with “hot button” issues, and the occasional piece of popular writing.

Additional information
In addition to readings, students will be asked to occasionally prepare for class by engaging with other forms of media. Students should arrange to have access to streaming services or iTunes for the duration of the course.
Objectives of the Course
By the end of the course students will be able to:

- Understand the historical trajectory of media and cultural studies scholarship on representation and identities
- Articulate key theoretical and methodological frameworks for studying media representation
- Apply this knowledge to interrogate and critique media texts and cultures
- Conduct independent research on representation and identities in media cultures

Textbook and Readings
Readings will be available on D2L. Books can be ordered on Amazon, or can be found in the University of Calgary library.

Internet and electronic communication device information
Laptops may be used for notetaking purposes only.

No audio or video recording of any kind is allowed in class without the permission of the professor.

Assignments:
In addition to the descriptions below, assignments will be introduced and discussed extensively in class. There will be time allotted in class for peer and professor feedback as you prepare your assignments.

<td>The success of a graduate seminar is determined by the active participation of students. Therefore, I ask that you arrive at class having read the required reading and prepared with ideas to contribute to discussion of the materials. I expect quality contributions that advance the discussion and encourage you to bring questions to pose to your classmates.</td> research project. The proposal should include: brief introduction to topic (including relevant literature), research question, object(s) of analysis, theoretical orientation, methodological approach, and a short bibliography (5-7 sources). The proposal must make clear how the research relates to issues of representation and identity as taken up in the course. Therefore, you do not need to study femininities, however you must utilize the course theories and methods to interrogate your object of analysis. We will discuss these expectations in class.

At the end of the term you will be required to give a short presentation (10 minutes) to your classmates based upon your research paper. A short (5 minutes) Q & A period will follow each presentation.

In consultation with the professor, you will produce a research paper that focuses on some aspect of representation and identity in media culture. Your paper topic may be related to your thesis topic, but should be original work produced for this seminar.

| Student Accommodations: |

Students seeking an accommodation based on disability or medical concerns should contact Student Accessibility Services; SAS will process the request and issue letters of accommodation to instructors. For additional information on support services and accommodations for students with disabilities, visit www.ucalgary.ca/access/.

Students who require an accommodation in relation to their coursework based on a protected ground other than disability should communicate this need in writing to their Instructor. The full policy on Student Accommodations is available at http://www.ucalgary.ca/policies/files/policies/student-accommodation-policy.pdf.

- Students seeking accommodation for transient illnesses (e.g., the flu) should contact their instructors. Whenever possible, students should advise their instructors in advance if they will be missing quizzes, presentations, in-class assignments, or group meetings.

- When accommodations are granted, they may take forms other than make-up tests or assignments. For example, the weight of a missed grade may be added to another assignment or test.

- For information on Deferrals of Final Exams and Term Work, see sections G.6 and G.7 of the University Calendar at http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/g-6.html and http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/g-7.html
Writing Skills Statement
Department policy directs that all written assignments (including, to a lesser extent, written exam responses) will be assessed at least partly on writing skills. Writing skills include not only surface correctness (grammar, punctuation, sentence structure, etc) but also general clarity and organization. Sources used in research papers must be properly documented. If you need help with your writing, you may use the Writing Centre. Visit the website for more details: http://www.ucalgary.ca/ssc/writing-support

Plagiarism
Using any source whatsoever without clearly documenting it is a serious academic offense. Consequences include failure on the assignment, failure in the course and possibly suspension or expulsion from the university.

You must document not only direct quotations but also paraphrases and ideas where they appear in your text. A reference list at the end is insufficient by itself. In-text citations must be provided, and readers must be able to tell exactly where your words and ideas end and other people’s words and ideas begin. Wording taken directly from a source must be enclosed within quotation marks (or, for long quotations, presented in the format prescribed by the documentation style you are using). Paraphrased information must not follow the original wording and sentence structure with only slight word substitutions here and there. These requirements apply to all assignments and sources, including those in non-traditional formats such as Web pages or visual media.

For information on citation and documentation styles (including APA, Chicago, IEEE, MLA, and others), visit the links provided at https://ucalgary.ca/ssc/resources/writing-support/436. If you have questions about how to document sources, please consult your instructor or the Writing Centre (3rd Floor TFDL, http://www.ucalgary.ca/ssc/writing-support).
Academic Misconduct
For information on academic misconduct and its consequences, please see the University of Calgary Calendar at http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/k.html

Research Ethics
Whenever you perform research with human participants (e.g., surveys, interviews, or observations) as part of your university studies, you are responsible for following university research ethics guidelines. Your instructor must review and approve your research plans and supervise your research. For more information about your research ethics responsibilities, see http://arts.ucalgary.ca/research/resources/ethics
